

Note: This is the latest AnonStar commercial between Joey Faust, who teaches some Christians will spend a thousand years in hell during the reign of Christ here on earth, and Greg Dixon. Faust debated Dr. Evans several years ago about Kingdom Exclusion. Enjoy the latest parody from the files of AnonStar.

The following commercial is based on a real scenario, the names were changed to protect the victims:

AnonStar: Hello, this is your AnonStar Advisor Greg Speaking.

JF: Yes, Doctor Di..., I mean, AnonStar, I need some advice as to how to defeat Herb Evans.

AnonStar: Well, I have experience with defeating him.

JF: Good. It's about this Kingdom Exclusion that I have come up with. Evans is blasting it all to h..., I mean, to smithereens. How can I come out on top?

AS: The first thing you do is attack him head-on.

JF: I did that, and it just got me an entire CD of his rebuttal articles for him. I actually made money for the guy.

AS: Well, the next thing is to get some cronies of yours to do your attacking for him, while you play the victim card and tell everyone he is attacking you.

JF: Okay, I'm doing that right now. Some of my people are debating him online. But they are not as good as me at twisti..., I mean, arguing the facts about it. They keep quoting my book, and Evans keeps bashing them.

AS: Well, then you'll just have to do what I have done.

JF: What's that?

AS: Pretend he is not doing anything that upsets you. Just remain silent. I've done it for almost three years, and that has worked just perfect. He can't hurt you if you close your eyes and he can't see you. Just be glad you haven't swindl..., I mean, been ACUSED of swindling a couple of your own church people out of $130,000.

JF: Great! Will this really work?

AS: Well, as long as your son doesn't lease the church building out to skimpily clad cheerleaders, or drive a BMW, or follow Rick Warren, then you'll be fine.

JF: Thanks, AnonStar. You're the best! By the way, have you made up your mind yet about Kingdom Exclusion?

AS: I'm still studying it. I figure it may take me another 25 years or so before I really take a stand either way.

JF: Well, just remember, if you don't start being faithful to only one church, then you could spend 1000 years in H..., I mean, Outer Da..., I mean, somewhere you won't want to be!

AS: Hey, I propagated your doctrine! How dare you threaten me, my son, our church, and the UBF!!!

JF: Sorry I said anything! Just forget it! You did help me spread my doctrine, so I'll give you a pass. Plus, your son bought into it, and that satellite pastor of yours believes every word I say. I guess I can let you into the kingdom for doing all that. Thanks, AnonStar.

AS: And don't you forget it. You are where you are because of me, my son, our church, and the UBF!

The previous was an actual AnonStar commercial, transcribed from an actual made-up phone conversation between an AnonStar Advisor and a client.